International Court of Justice "Certain Activities Carried Out by Poland in the Border Area (Belarus v. Poland)"

On February 1st, 2022, the Republic of Belarus filed an Application instituting proceedings against the Republic of Poland in respect of an alleged violence by the Polish officials vis-a-vis migrants coming from the territory of Belarus. The alleged violations of international customary law include violation of the non-refoulement principle and prohibition of collective expulsion as well as illegal construction of a physical border fence.

UN Women "Realizing the rights of women in the world of work for better economic resilience"

The given committee will consider measures aimed at economic empowerment of women in the light of the COVID-19 shock. Not only can the limited gains in gender equality made over decades be jeopardized due to the global pandemic, but the existing inequalities can be exacerbated ever further. Therefore, development of campaigns and policies that would promote women's rights and their economic participation is a matter of utmost urgency, which in the long term will facilitate stronger economic recovery.

United Nations Development Programme "Food Security & Sustainable Food Systems"

Emerging environmental risks and conflicts put the functions of existing food systems in danger. Disrupted food supply is usually associated with malnutrition, which in turn triggers instability and violence. Yet, sustainable food systems (SFS) that would ensure economic, social and environmental stability are not commonly implemented. The main task of the UNDP committee will be identifying the current challenges in regard to food security as well as developing a framework that will promote SFS.

Press team "Crisis coverage in media and the role of journalists in international conflicts"

With tensions and polarization shaping the widespread narrative of international conflicts, the age of traditional journalism is coming to an end. In a world where information costs everything, how much power does the court of public opinion hold and how to balance the profit gained from human tragedy and ethics of just reporting? The main task of the press team is to give the participants a hands-on experience from the frontlines of international discourse.
